

There will be, as well, sensorial close ups and macros: the pores in the skin expressing, drops hitting slow motion in neck and scalp where we can clearly appreciate 2 different directions, steam that grows up and takes over the glass screen... we could even go for something slightly more abstract always related with water's power: water hitting the lens, some visually stunning shots that are related more to what our hero is experiencing "spiritually" still using water as the element to create it.

